Court Square and Pulse Software partner to bring project management excellence to Contract Research Organizations

Pulse Software announces selection of Court Square Group to be the US implementation partner for its 4CRO Global Project Management Software.

Springfield, Mass. and Montreal, Quebec, November 20, 2008 – Court Square Group, Inc., an information technology and life sciences consulting firm has agreed to be the United States implementation partner for Pulse Software’s 4CRO project management system designed for Contract Research Organizations (CROs).

“All CROs, whether small or large, face a series of challenges such as providing Sponsors accurate information in real time on their ongoing projects” says Bernard de Savignies, President of Pulse Software. “Our 4CRO solution addresses these hurdles while improving the quality of the operational processes. We are excited to have a company with Court Square’s expertise in project management and life science data management as our implementation partner in the United States.”

“We are true believers in the discipline of project management, using PMI principles with all of our customers” adds Andy Sontag, Vice-President of Court Square Life Sciences practice. “4CRO is a global project management system targeted at the specific needs of a contract research organization. That customization combined with our long history of supporting life sciences clients and integrating applications makes this a natural fit for Court Square and for customers of Pulse Software.”

Court Square Group, Inc., is a strategic consulting firm providing life sciences expertise and IT solutions for companies in transition including networking and security.
